

The airing of the film "Stolen Honor", by Sinclair Broadcasting, is in total defiance of any public media ethics. A news company, using public airwaves free of charge, should never be permitted to air partisan propaganda. Public interest seems to be the last thing that this company is concerned with. Sinclair's biased coverage of current events should be seen as an example of why we should strengthen laws governing ownership of media outlets. Without an accurate, non-partisan media, the American people have no way of making informed decisions.
